

25th of November 2015
International Day of violence against women

*Women organize, act, struggle –
against violence on women,
for self-determination and a free society*

On 25 November 1960, the three sisters Patria, Minerva und Maria Terese Mirabal were murdered by para-military troops of the dictator Trujillo in Dominican Republic after they had visited their imprisoned husbands in jail.

Today, 55 years later, hundred thousands of women and men worldwide go into the streets on November 25th to protest against violence against women.

In Asia, Latin America, Europe, in the Near East, all across the world awareness is growing against the many open and hidden forms of violence women and girls all over the globe are facing.

We protest against all forms of violence: against domestic violence in family environment as well as violence by women trafficking and sexism. Against the various forms of mental and structural violence caused by poverty and profit-seeking as well as violence by war, destruction of environment, displacement, racism and fundamentalism.

The pain suffered by millions of refugee women is our pain. The struggle of the women in Rojava for democracy and overcoming patriarchal society is our struggle.

We want to live as free women in free societies.
This is what we unite for.

We invite you to our demonstration
on 25th of November 2015,
Mannheim Main Station

16:00 information booth by Mannheim Network Women
17:30 start of the demonstration

25th of November 2015
International Day of
violence against women

*Women organize, act, struggle –
against violence on women,
for self-determination and a free society*

On 25 November 1960, the three sisters Patria, Minerva und Maria Terese Mirabal were murdered by para-military troops of the dictator Trujillo in Dominican Republic after they had visited their imprisoned husbands in jail.

Today, 55 years later, hundred thousands of women and men worldwide go into the streets on November 25th to protest against violence against women.

In Asia, Latin America, Europe, in the Near East, all across the world awareness is growing against the many open and hidden forms of violence women and girls all over the globe are facing.

We protest against all forms of violence: against domestic violence in family environment as well as violence by women trafficking and sexism. Against the various forms of mental and structural violence caused by poverty and profit-seeking as well as violence by war, destruction of environment, displacement, racism and fundamentalism.

The pain suffered by millions of refugee women is our pain. The struggle of the women in Rojava for democracy and overcoming patriarchal society is our struggle.

We want to live as free women in free societies.
This is what we unite for.

We invite you to our demonstration
on 25th of November 2015,
Mannheim Main Station

16:00 information booth by Mannheim Network Women
17:30 start of the demonstration

